革命派的崛起

Zhang Mingqi

Zhang Mingqi took office as the grand co-ordinator of Guangxi in 1907. During his term, he petitioned the Qing court to “quickly set up a responsible cabinet”. He became the viceroy of Guangdong and Guangxi Provinces in October 1910. When Guangdong declared independence after the 1911 Revolution broke out, Zhang was selected to be Guangdong’s military governor, but refused the offer and fled to Hong Kong. When the Republic of China was founded, he once served as the President’s Consultant to Yuan Shikai.
